Portfolio Commentary

So far, 2025 has been a period of heightened uncertainty and volatility for global investment markets. President Trump’s trade and fiscal policies triggered sharp market falls early in the year, while the imposition of tariffs and the reshaping of global supply chains added further pressure. A significant decline in the US dollar dampened returns from US equities for UK-based investors, and ongoing inflationary concerns kept central banks in a delicate balancing act when it comes to lowering interest rates. Despite these headwinds, markets showed much resilience, with many major indices recovering from earlier losses as investors adjusted to the shifting political and economic landscape.

The NorthStar Adventurous Growth Portfolio performed relatively well over the past six months, with a return of 2% since the last investment review. This performance saw it finish well ahead of the benchmark, which ended the period 1% higher. Over the past year as a whole, the portfolio is up by 13.8%, well ahead of the benchmark, which rose 9.2%. The best performing fund was ‘Vanguard Emerging Markets Stock Index’, with a return of over 8% during the past six months. At the other end of the spectrum was ‘Liontrust Global Alpha’, recording a loss of 1.6% over this period.

The outlook for the remainder of the year presents a mixed picture. Inflation and interest rates are expected to remain the dominant market forces, with central banks navigating the challenge of stimulating growth while avoiding an inflation resurgence. President Trump’s stance on international trade, particularly with key partners such as China and the EU, will continue to influence market sentiment and global economic momentum. At the same time, structural shifts such as technological innovation and the green transition are disrupting traditional sectors. In this environment, investors should anticipate continued market turbulence and maintain a disciplined, diversified approach to achieve their long-term financial goals.
